Heading back to work with Nick Lowe

We spoke with the legendary songwriter ahead of his upcoming tour.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

To know anything about legendary British songwriter Nick Lowe is to know that he has always approached music as though it was just another job that needs to get done. He just happens to do that job incredibly well.

As a producer he helped to create some of the most defining rock records of the '70s punk and New Wave era as well as writing such classic songs as "What's So Funny 'Bout Peace Love and Understanding," "Cruel to Be Kind," "So it Goes," and "I Love the Sound of Breaking Glass."

Recently, Lowe has been touring the globe with the lucha libre masked surf-rock band Los Straitjackets as his backing band and treating fans old and new to one of the most eclectic and celebrated catalogs in all of rock 'n' roll. We caught up with Lowe to talk about this fruitful collaboration and the power of writing simple songs.

How did your partnership with Los Straightjackets come about?

Well, I've known them for quite a long time from bumping into them on the circuit, so to speak, but we also share a manager. And about, it's longer ago than it seems actually, about six years ago I released a Christmas record, which enjoyed a surprising amount of success in the United States.

Shortly after it was released, two of my main musical collaborators that I'd been with for years and years and also had become quite close friends with, died. One after the other, I couldn't promote the record. The next Christmas came around, I just couldn't do it. I let the wind out of my sail, and I just couldn't make it out there. Anyway, with the passing of time, it was suggested by my manager and by Straightjackets' manager that why don't I do a few Christmas shows with the Straightjackets, which we did, and they were pretty good.

We did it the next year, somewhere along the West Coast, and the next year somewhere else, and then we came to Europe, and we did a bunch of shows here all over countries in Europe, and it was really good fun. But, we felt we had done that then. But along comes offers. We started to get offers to do what you might describe as out of season work, and that took off, people really went for that. So that's when we really get a kick out of doing it.

Your career is so defined by your workmanlike approach to music. Do you enjoy giving yourself assignments like that?

Oh, you mean with the Christmas record, for instance? Oh yeah, when it was suggested to me. I never would have thought of doing it, because in the U.K. to put out a Christmas album it was seen as kind of vulgar. I think it got a good laugh, the great, great Christmas songs are all American, from what I can see. You guys seem to take it all with a pinch of salt, over here people just do the same 10 tunes. It's almost like they don't know that there are way more! So my initial reaction when it was first put to me was "Oh, dear, who do you think I am? Don't you know that I'm an internationally celebrated songwriter? I'm not dirtying my hands on something as…" Well, that thought lasted for about three and a half seconds, and it was immediately replaced by, wait a minute, this could be a really good laugh! And you know, I phoned up my pals, and we got down to it straight away, deciding what tunes we were going to do and things like that. It was really good fun.

I've read a quote of yours where you said you like to write a song as though it is a cover. Like some stranger is coming up with those emotions and narratives. Is the protagonist unrecognizable when you look back at some of your older songs?

With the best stuff, yes, it's like someone else has done it. That's the best when I can listen back and hear myself going to work in some of the old records. Which frankly isn't very often, but occasionally they'll play one of my records on the radio and sometimes I'll be quite pleased.

But when it comes to writing songs especially now that I'm older, and it's still a mysterious process, it's something you can't turn on or indeed turn off, when you're in the mood. When one's come along, suddenly you'll get a bite and you realize that you're onto something and I'll turn the thing over in my mind.

The great thing about being a songwriter is that you can write songs anywhere, you're doing the shopping, filling your car with gas, you know, especially driving, sitting on the train, you could be walking down the street thinking and working on your song. But I turn the thing over in my mind over and over again, until like you just said, that I start to believe I'm singing a cover song. And the opposite is true when I get onto a cover, you know a cover that I like. If I hear a song that people haven't heard millions of times before, if I find some old song where I'm like "boy, that's good." I'll turn it over and over again in my mind, and I'll work on it and work on it, until I start to believe that I wrote it. And you wind up at the same place. It feels like an old coat. that you just put on and it feels totally natural, but isn't quite yours. You know, I don't really like the stuff that I do that sounds like me, you know what I perceive that sounds like me, you know I always inwardly groan, "oh God not that old thing again, here it comes."

Are you still mystified when you stumble upon a simple song?

Oh yeah, it's the greatest thing to do a simple song. One with three chords. One chord is even better, and it is possible to do! It's perfectly possible to do it with one cord. Well, it's possible but very, very difficult. It's got to sound natural, it's got to sound cool and surprising. So the intervals, where the rhythm of the song is, the intervals have to be surprising. Like in blues. The way old blues singers used to phrase their stuff is just brilliant, mysterious, and difficult to catch. Because normally, your ear is attracted to a certain symmetry in a song, and a one-note symmetry is pushed out, pushed to an unusual place. But it's still symmetrical and a wonderful feeling, but it's ever so difficult to achieve it naturally.

5 BEST ROBOTIC ANIMAL COMPANIONS

TOMBOT

This a little robot in a shape of a dog designed to be effective substitute for live animal companions. As such, it provides all the benefits of a live animal without the burden of care, the risk of bites, allergic reactions or infections. Tombot features a software control system that allows the robot to interact with users in a way a real dog would. It also has voice recognition.

QOOBO

People love pets, but unfortunately not everyone can have one, whether for health reasons, lack of time or space in their homes. That is why Qoobo, an interactive cushion with a tail that moves in response to the user's stroking and rubbing, was developed. This little cyborg in the shape of half the torso and tail of a cat is designed to provide a sense of comfort to owners.

LOVOT

Although this little one doesn't look like any pet you know, it can also keep you company and let you hug it. This robot of Japanese origin is able to recognize the face of someone who loves them. Lovot is also programmed to make eye contact with its owners, respond to gestures, recognize movements and follow, keeping pace with them as they walk.

PARO

Paro is an advanced interactive robot developed by AIST, a leading Japanese industrial automation pioneer. It allows the documented benefits of animal therapy to be administered to patients in environments such as hospitals and extended care facilities where live animals present treatment or logistical difficulties. By interacting with people, Paro responds as if it is alive by moving its head, legs and making sounds.

CAT & DOG

Joy For All recently created its line of companion robots shaped as pets, including one cat and one dog. These robotic animals respond to petting, hugging and motion much like the real ones you know and love, but don't require any special care or feeding.

It is spinning too fast

NASA's Hubble Space Telescope managed to capture an asteroid, which spins so fast that it has started to self-destruct. The images by the telescope show two narrow, comet-like tails of dusty debris streaming from the Gault. Each tail represents an episode in which the space body gently shed its material—key evidence that it is tearing apart. The asteroid's narrow streamers suggest that the dust was released in short bursts, lasting from a few hours to a few days. MWN

"Gault is the best 'smoking gun' example of a fast rotator right at the two-hour limit [it spins once every 2 hours]."

Jan Kleyna, member of the Gault observing team, stated.

is the year the asteroid Gault was discovered.

800k

km is the length of the longest tail of this asteroid.

5 Fun things to do in Boston this weekend

Practice your yoga, paint like Bob Ross or rock out like Jimi Hendrix.

MOIRA CALLAHAN

Ah, feel that sun on your face! The spring weather is here, and not a moment too soon. It's time to get out of the house and enjoy everything the city has to offer. Luckily, there are plenty of things to do in Boston this weekend. So settle in. Here is our list of the top five fun things to do in Boston this weekend.

Rock & Roll Rumble

The Rock & Roll Rumble is a time-honored tradition where rock 'n' roll bands play to new audiences, gain new fans and raise their profile in the city. Twenty-four bands participate over nine nights each spring to win money, prizes and opportunities. This year the Rock & Roll Rumble is happening at ONCE Somerville, a bar and lounge with great drinks and atmosphere. The event is sponsored by Jack's Abby Craft Lagers. "We're really excited to be a part of this year's Rock & Roll Rumble. As an independent brewery out of Framingham, Jack's Abby is always looking for ways to support other independent, local partners, such as ONCE and Anngelle Wood," says Andy Grant, director of sales and marketing for Jack's Abby in a release. You can catch Rock & Roll Rumble's Preliminary Week One this weekend in Somerville from 8 to 11:45 p.m.

April 4-6, 8-11:45 p.m., ONCE Ballroom, 156 Highland Ave., Somerville, $10+, oncesomerville.com

Italian Dinner with Tiramisu Finale

Nothing is better than Italian food. There's delicious bread, pasta, wine, and so much more. This cooking class will teach you about the joys of Italian cooking, finishing with a showstopping tiramisu. This incredible Italian dessert consists of ladyfingers drenched in expresso, layered with a delicious mixture of eggs, sugar and mascarpone cheese. Master Chef Celio Pereira is teaching this class with over 30 years of experience and a passion for Italian cuisine. The night will end with an unforgettable dinner featuring your creations!

April 5, 6-9 p.m., Selfup Cooking Classes, 460 Harrison Ave., $100, selfup.com

Tipsy Chocolate Tour

Is there anything better than chocolate? This walking tour around the Freedom Trail is only made better by adding in some boozy chocolates and a hand-crafted cocktail. The Tipsy Chocolate Tour is a two-hour stroll through Boston's finest confectionaries and historical sites. You will learn from your tour guide/chocolate ambassador about the history of chocolate and its ties to Boston.

April 6, 12:30-2:30 p.m., Tipsy Chocolate Tours, 303 Newbury St., $68, 21+, tipsychocolates.com

Yoga in the Beer Garden

Get outside at the Remnant Brewery for yoga in the Beer Garden. After class, attendees can drink craft beer or sit out on the private patio to enjoy coffee, tea, kombucha or snacks from Iggy's and other small vendors. All experience levels are welcome to join this Vinyasa flow, which includes 10 minutes of challenging core work

Aries Be open to suggestions and look for the positive in everything you see, hear and do. Make adjustments that suit your needs to be one step closer to your dreams.

Taurus Look over financial matters or check into a pending legal or medical issue you've been dealing with. Don't let someone else speak on your behalf.

Gemini Offer encouragement, but don't feel you must take part in someone else's plans. You are best off putting your energy into something that will benefit you, not someone else.

Cancer Follow your creative dreams. Put time aside to contemplate the best way to use your skills and talents to advance. Someone influential will take interest in what you are trying to do.

Leo Don't make changes that aren't necessary. Save your energy for things that really matter. Take better care of your health and finances. Moderation is encouraged.

Virgo Don't trust what someone else tells you. Go directly to the source and verify facts before you get involved in a financial or legal deal. Partnerships should be considered carefully.

Libra Observe what's going on around you and watch how others are reacting before you share your opinion. Sometimes, it's best to take a neutral position and proceed to do your own thing.

Scorpio Dream big, but only take on what's feasible. A relationship will benefit if you are honest about your feelings and intentions. A promise or commitment can be made.

Sagittarius Get physical and make home improvements that will add to your comfort and convenience. Find a space in which you can develop an idea, plan or small business.

Capricorn If you or someone else overreacts, problems will develop. Listen carefully and don't make assumptions. If you don't fully understand what's expected of you or what someone is suggesting, ask questions.

Aquarius If you get together with an old friend or colleague, you'll be offered an interesting point of view about something you are considering. A positive change can be made.

Huffman, Loughlin warned about discussing college scam with their kids

Huffman is accused of making a $15,000 contribution in exchange for correcting her daughter's SAT exam.

A U.S. judge on Wednesday warned parents charged in the largest college-admissions scandal in U.S. history, including actresses Felicity Huffman and Lori Loughlin, to avoid discussing the case with their children, who are potential witnesses.

Prosecutors had wanted U.S. Magistrate Judge M. Page Kelley in Boston to go further and prohibit the 12 wealthy parents who appeared before her from talking about the case with their children without a lawyer present.

While Kelley warned the parents that discussing the case with their children could expose them to potential obstruction of justice charges, she said she did not think the prosecution's proposed conditions on parental communications could work.

"I just don't think that's realistic," Kelley said.

"Desperate Housewives" star Huffman and "Full House" actor Loughlin said little during the hearing other than to say that they understood the charges prosecutors brought against them. They are among 50 people, including several college athletics coaches, charged with participating in fraud and bribery schemes.

Prosecutors said those schemes involved cheating on college entrance exams and paying $25 million in bribes to help their children gain admission at well-known universities including Yale University and the University of Southern California (USC).

Some of the 33 parents charged in the scheme have begun plea negotiations with prosecutors. On Wednesday, packaged-food entrepreneur Peter Sartorio became the first to reveal he plans to plead guilty. Two others said they were also in plea talks.

Prosecutors say the scheme was overseen by California college-admissions consultant William "Rick" Singer, who has admitted to facilitating the cheating scam and bribing coaches to present the parents' children as fake athletic recruits.

Loughlin walked into the courthouse past a group of fans yelling, "Lori, we love you," and left smiling. Huffman exited the court holding her brother's hand.

Prosecutors allege that Loughlin and her husband, Los Angeles fashion designer Mossimo Giannulli, agreed to pay $500,000 to have their two daughters named as recruits to USC's crew team, even though they did not row competitively.

Huffman, who is married to the actor William H. Macy, is accused of making a $15,000 contribution to Singer's foundation in exchange for having an associate of Singer's in 2017 secretly correct her daughter's answers on an SAT college entrance exam at a test center prosecutors say Singer "controlled."

$500K

Loughlin and her husband, Los Angeles fashion designer Mossimo Giannulli, agreed to pay $500,000 to have their two daughters named as recruits to USC's crew team, even though they did not row competitively.

Huffman later made arrangements to engage in the scheme again on her younger daughter's behalf before deciding not to, prosecutors said.

Sartorio, who is expected to plead guilty later this month, similarly paid $15,000 to have his daughter's ACT exam corrected by Singer's associate, prosecutors said.

Prosecutors have not yet charged any applicants and said that in some cases the parents involved took steps to try to prevent their children from realizing they were benefiting from fraud. REUTERS

Customize your own luxurious vacation at Serenity at Coconut Bay

There are many different reasons why people need to take vacations. The constant grind of the work week or simply getting worn down by day-to-day obligations can take its toll without some serious rest and relaxation. But sometimes, some of those things can follow you around even when you are on your trip away from home. Loud families with children running through the hallways of the resort you are staying at can seriously be an unwanted distraction — especially when you have scraped together all of your money to pay for this trip!

Luckily, Serenity at Coconut Bay on the exotic south coast of Saint Lucia will provide the adult's-only experience you are looking for, so you can unwind on your own terms in one of the 36 private-butler Plunge Pool Suites. Think of it as actually finding your own "Serenity."

That is exactly what you will find at the resort, as guests will be pampered by Serenity at Coconut Bay's very own all-inclusive and luxurious intuitive butler service. A full staff of butlers will be at your complete beck and call 24 hours a day to make sure your experience is nothing but exceptional. Whether you are looking for breakfast in bed, dinner under the moonlight, or simply cocktails on your private deck — the highly trained staff at Serenity at Coconut Bay will have you covered.

This discreet exclusive butler service is just the beginning, as guests will also have access to gourmet in-suite and restaurant dining, premium spirits, private pools and beach cabanas, in-suite spa treatments, all surrounded by the exotic beauty of Saint Lucia.

Couples will be treated to in-suite couples' massages or naps in their very own made-for-two hammocks. After you have truly unwound, your butlers will be able to plan either a dreamy beach picnic in a secluded spot along Serenity's mile-long beach, with views of the Maria Islands Nature Reserve, or a romantic date in a Serenity beach cabana. No matter how chill or how extravagant your ideal vacation is, the butlers at Serenity will make sure that your dreams are fulfilled exactly to your liking.

While other resorts have their own pools, how many resort pools have you been to that are actually award-winning? In 2018, USA Today named the pool at Serenity at Coconut Bay one of "2018's Best Pools in the Caribbean."

The 36 Plunge Pool Butler Suites at Serenity at Coconut Bay will make you feel like royalty. Handcrafted finishes — including Saint Lucia river rock, granite and mahogany — intertwine and seamlessly blend the spacious indoor and outdoor living areas into one. Lush tropical plants and coconut trees add to the island feel as guests will begin to forget where the indoor living spaces end, and outdoor lounging areas begin. Some of the amazing features include plunge pools, oversized soaking tubs, glass-enclosed rain showers in en-suite bathrooms, and custom-made mahogany king beds.

Your entire experience at Serenity will be completely customizable, with meals and drinks at the ready within a moment's notice. Dining on Saint Lucian and international specialties is key in Serenity's Greathouse Restaurant — as is lingering over a drink at the pool bar.

If you would like to explore the island, Serenity at Coconut Bay also offers guests exclusive private tours of all of the wonders of Saint Lucia, including playing in the mud baths at the world's only drive-in volcano, swimming under a waterfall, seeing the world-famous Piton mountains, and spectacular 360-degree island views at the world's second-highest lighthouse.

For more information on this one-of-a-kind island getaway, visit www.serenityatcoconutbay.com or call 877-252-0304 today.

Gentle reminder: These 3 countries are NOT a part of Mexico

We're looking at you,
Fox News.

FodorsTravel

On Saturday, the Trump administration released a statement saying that it will be cutting financial assistance to Guatemala, Honduras and El Salvador. Approximately $700 million will be slashed.

Sen. Bob Menendez — a top Democrat on the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations — urged both parties to reject the move. "U.S. foreign assistance is not charity; it advances our strategic interests and funds initiatives that protect American citizens," Menendez told NBC News.

All of this is worrisome enough, but a Fox News segment on Sunday got us worrying even more. "Fox and Friends Weekend" displayed across its chyron, "TRUMP CUTS AID TO 3 MEXICAN COUNTRIES." (The network has since apologized, with co-host Ed Henry saying, "We just want to be clear, the funding is being cut off to the three Central American countries. We apologize for the error — it never should've happened.")

As travel experts, we'd be derelict in our duties if we didn't make this public service announcement: Guatemala, Honduras and El Salvador are definitely not part of Mexico, they are not "Mexican countries." They are their own sovereign countries. Not only that, but they're pretty damn great.

Guatemala

Guatemala — known as the country of the eternal spring — is extraordinary in so many ways. It's pleasant to visit any time of the year thanks to its temperate climate and, with colorful markets, exotic wildlife (from spider monkeys to toucans), colonial architecture, and quality white-water rafting, it offers a lot to the average tourist, which makes it irresistible. If you're looking for a place to kick off your Guatemalan travels, we're particularly fond of the country's capital, Guatemala City. The city is home to some incredible architecture, especially if you're interested in religious iconography — the baroque Iglesia de la Merced and the small, yet quaint Iglesia de San Francisco, which features unique carvings galore.

Beyond the capital are a number of other majestic destinations. Just outside Guatemala City is the colonial town of Antigua, a kaleidoscope of color framed by a dramatic volcano. Another three hours away is Lake Atitlan, a tranquil gem, also under the shadow of volcanoes. In the north of the country, surrounded by lush jungles, is the ancient Mayan citadel, Tikal, a UNESCO World Heritage site. Those who ruled from within this kingdom were some of the most powerful in all of the Mayan lands.

Honduras

Honduras is widely recognized as the "Athens of Central America," because of the number of rich, historical attractions the country holds; the city of Copán is home to some especially striking Mayan architecture. Honduras' northern coast is very lively, thanks in part to La Ceiba (a.k.a. the "Eco-Tourism Capital of Honduras"), the third-largest city in the country. Also on the coast is the Río Plátano Biosphere Reserve, an UNESCO World Heritage Site that is home to 1.3 million acres of preserved land where you can spot all sorts of plants and wildlife, including 377 species of birds. If you're looking for a few island days, spend some time on Cayos Cochinos and Utila; both are known for their scuba-diving culture, especially the Cayos Cochinos, which boasts pristine coral reefs.

El Salvador

A 2018 Fodor's Go List destination, El Salvador has certainly come into its own as a tourist destination in the last couple of years. We recommend going between December and January, just after the rainy season, so you'll get to drink in all of those green landscapes. The country also offers some excellent surfing, which is best done between May and August (at destinations like Las Flores and Mizata). Notable tourist hot spots include the ancient Mayan UNESCO World Heritage site Joya de Cerén (deemed the "Pompeii of the Americas") and Lake Coatepeque. JESSE TABIT

SPORTS

Big Boston sports weekend on tap

What do we make of the slow start by the Red Sox?

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

Former NBA coach Pat Riley once said that "success is often the first step toward disaster."

Titled "The Disease of More," the gist is that once a team wins a championship, almost every player on that team believes he is a little bit better than he probably is. And all of those players want to be financially rewarded for their contributions toward that title.

The Red Sox's early-season struggles are probably just a blip on the radar. They are ultra-talented, they seem selfless, and they have the type of players who will "figure it out."

That said, there have been some seeds planted in the past few months that indicate things could eventually get ugly.

The team's two best offensive players, Mookie Betts and J.D. Martinez, could both bolt via free agency in the next few years. Betts has indicated that he wants to play the free-agent game and that he wants to be wooed.

More pressing is Martinez, who could opt out of his contract after this year.

"This guy is some kind of hitter," Martinez's agent Scott Boras told WEEI.com's Rob Bradford this week. "He and (Nationals star Anthony) Rendon are probably going to be the two most focused on offensive player on the market as far as guys who are elite offensive players. Yeah … not that I think about those things."

It's a small sample size, but Martinez has been carrying the Boston offense so far. He leads the team in batting average (.360), home runs (2), RBIs (7) and hits (9). Betts, meanwhile, has had a relatively slow start to the season, as he is hitting just .222 and has just one RBI.

Red Sox weekend

Martinez, Betts and the Red Sox will wrap up their series in Oakland on Thursday with a matinee (3:30 p.m., NESN) as Eduardo Rodriguez will square off against Brett Anderson. It's already an important start for Rodriguez as he was lit up by the Mariners last week, surrendering five earned runs in just 4.1 innings of work. He heads into this one with an ugly 10.38 ERA.

The Sox will spend Friday-Sunday playing the Diamondbacks in Arizona with Rick Porcello, David Price and a pitcher TBD slated to throw. Red Sox manager Alex Cora slid Chris Sale back a couple days so that he could get the start in the home opener on Tuesday against the Blue Jays.

Celtics playoff preview

The Celtics will get one final test run against the team they will play in the first round of the NBA playoffs, the Indiana Pacers, on Friday night in Indy (8 p.m., NBC Sports Boston). This game is wildly important for both teams as the winner of this regular-season finale will most likely get home-court advantage in the first-round matchup. The Celtics will only have two games left in the regular season after the Friday-nighter against the Pacers.

The C's earned a narrow 114-112 victory over Indiana back on March 29 at the Garden but they will need to do a better job on swingman Bojan Bogdanovic this time around as Bogdanovic hit 8-of-13 shots from the floor on his way to a 27-point outing in the most recent matchup. Kyrie Irving did lead all scorers in that contest, pumping in a game-high 30.

The Celtics will wrap up the weekend on Sunday in their regular-season home finale as they host the Magic (7:30 p.m., NBC Sports Boston).

J.D. Martinez is the lone Red Sox player off to a hot start. GETTY IMAGES

Bruins fine-tunin'

By virtue of their 6-2 slamming of the Blue Jackets on Tuesday night, the Bruins secured home-ice advantage in their first-round series against the Maple Leafs. The Toronto series will kick off either next Wednesday or Thursday.

Expect Bruce Cassidy to give many of his key players a rest on Thursday (at Wild) and Saturday (home vs. Tampa Bay), the final two regular-season games for the B's.

Kyrie Irving and the Celtics will take on the Pacers this weekend. GETTY IMAGES

WHO WILL PREVAIL AT WRESTLEMANIA 35?

OPINION

WWE Universal Champion Brock Lesnar will take on Seth Rollins Sunday at WrestleMania 35. GETTY IMAGES

When Pete Rose was inducted into the WWE Hall of Fame in 2004 (yes, this actually happened), the late great Bobby "The Brain" Heenan quipped to a sold-out crowd, "I have a confession to make … I bet on pro wrestling." The line brought the house down, and even got a chuckle out of Rose himself.

Fifteen years later, Heenan's joke isn't all that ridiculous.

Consider that in February, nearly all of the sportsbooks in the country set odds and took wagers on the Oscars. In other words, the books were taking bets on something that was pre-determined.

This has opened the door for sportsbooks to take bets on major pro wrestling events — and there is considerable betting buzz this week ahead of the 35th edition of WrestleMania, which takes place this Sunday at MetLife Stadium in New Jersey. Here are some odds and betting advice for some of the top matches.

Brock Lesnar +120 vs. Seth Rollins -160

Lesnar is always a threat to leave WWE in real life because of his outside interests (read: UFC and farming). But in recent years, WWE has enjoyed spinning real-life Lesnar news into an unpredictable finish. Still, Seth Rollins has never won the WWE Universal title and is overdue for a run with the strap.

The play: Rollins -160

Ronda Rousey +400 vs. Becky Lynch -350 vs. Charlotte Flair +1275

This match is going on last. Back in the day, Vince McMahon used to like to send everyone home happy at the WWE's biggest event of the year. Giving Lynch the win here would please the crowd, but McMahon would surely rather grab those Monday morning headlines by giving Rousey the big win.

The play: Rousey +400

Triple H -260 vs. Batista +180

Going against the grain here again.

WWE wants to shock its fans with an Undertaker vs. Brock Lesnar-like finish. A win by Batista in Triple H's "career-threatening match" would drop a few jaws … Triple H can always just reinstate himself, anyway.

The play: Batista +180

Kurt Angle -195 vs. Baron Corbin +155

Even if John Cena shows up in this match (Angle's farewell bout, BTW), expect the Olympic Gold medalist to go out a winner.

The play: Kurt Angle -195

AJ Styles +110 vs. Randy Orton -150

Orton is one of those guys the WWE has to prop up with big wins at big events in order to keep him relevant to fans. Fans will always be interested in Styles regardless of a win or a loss.

The play: Randy Orton -150

Daniel Bryan +180 vs. Kofi Kingston -260

It feels like WWE will only win with the "smart fans" by having either Becky Lynch win or Kofi Kingston grab a victory. Here's saying Kofi will the get lifetime achievement nod.

The play: Kofi Kingston -260

Will Gronk -220 or Conor McGregor +180 appear at WrestleMania?

Gronk showed up at WrestleMania two years ago coming off an injury and was still under contract with the Patriots at the time. Now he has no such restrictions. He's a good bet to appear in the Andre the Giant Memorial Battle Royal. Maybe he even wins.

McGregor is more of a long shot here, but wouldn't it be fun if he interfered in the Lesnar match and KO'd Brock back to UFC?

The play: Gronk yes, McGregor no

Rob Gronkowski. GETTY IMAGES
